'Is 'If I Don't Get My Way ...' rings Small Nation Pressure

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Nov. 2 (UPI)—Pressure in smaller nations may force the Russians to call off their erstwhile boycott of United Nations disarmament talks, atomic sources said today.

The sources said reaction to Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev's warning that he would pull his delegation out of the main political committee debate unless disarmament is decided his way and quickly had stirred a lot of resentment among lesser and uncommitted nations.

HUNGARY, THE LAST of the nine Soviet Bloc nations hammer home the Communist theme in the 99-nation committee, was listed to speak today.

It had been expected that the Soviets would pull their kout after all the Red speakers had finished, but diplomats said it appeared unlikely now that it would come today.

U. S. AMBASSADOR James J. Wadsworth and Soviet ambassador Valerian A. Zorin talked privately for about 15 minutes yesterday but informed sources said the Russian seemed to back down on his insistence that a disarmament treaty be agreed upon before discussion of controls.

Wadsworth had arranged the meeting after noting a comment by Zorin that "some measures" encouraging confidence among nations could be taken before a general treaty completed.

A line has been set aside for question and free discussion of various viewpoints.

Other Freedom Week committee members include Ron Walker, Don Udall, Julie Pingree and Craig Christensen, who is chairman of this forum.

A shocking 65-minute film strip narration "Communism on the Map," will be used to usher in Freedom Forum, sponsored by the Provo Chamber of Commerce and Brigham Young University, Thursday.

The forum will highlight Utah County Freedom Week and will be held in the Knight Bldg. beginning at 9 a.m.

THE FILM TELLS the facts of Communist expansion from the time of the 1917 revolution in Moscow to the revolution in Cuba last year which snatched America's neighbor into the Communist orbit.

John Noble, an American who spent eight years as a Siberian slave laborer will address forum participants. Since his return to the U.S., he has dedicated his life to a Christian crusade against Communism.

THREATS TO THE American system will be illustrated by a panel discussion by Glen A. Green, director of the forum. The forms and degrees of socialist welfare states and what they are producing for their peoples will be illustrated in a filmstrip report.

"The Two Berlins," a movie which will be narrated personally by Mr. Green, will compare the Red Zone and the capitalist sections of Berlin.

BRAINWASHING WILL come in for its share of observation with a flannelboard presentation of the U. S. Army's findings in its investigation of the defection of American GIs in North Korea prison camps.

Scheduled agenda items will be interspersed with question and answer periods and general discussions in which the registered participants of the forum may take part.

GOVERNOR GEORGE D. Clyde of Utah gave the forum his personal endorsement. His note said: "This program to emphasize the threat of Communism to our traditional values and American way of life is to be commended, and merits the support of all Utahns and loyal citizens. I feel that the Freedom Forum will make a significant and important contribution toward enabling participants to become keenly aware of the dangers on encroaching communism."

Philip Perlman, president of the Provo Chamber of Commerce, and John T. Bernhard, administrative assistant to the president of BYU, are co-chairmen, with William K. Wotherspoon, manager of the Chamber of Commerce as coordinator.

DEVELOPED UNDER the direction of the National Education Program, Searcy, Ark., the forum has met with success in former presentations in various sections of the country. It will be conducted in Provo by Glenn A. Green, executive vice president of NEP.

Russ, China Arm Cuba

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 2 (UPI)—Two members of a five-man group which fled Cuba for fear of execution said yesterday that Russia and Red China are secretly stockpiling arms on the island and that Cuban people live under constant surveillance.

The two, Teofilo Hiraldo, 28, a brokerage employee, and Alfonso Espinal, 30, a former policeman, arrived in Havana Wednesday night in a 15-foot rowboat and were picked up Thursday night by an American freighter.

ALL FIVE were given provisional political asylum when the ship docked in Baton Rouge, La.

Hiraldo said he and his friends fled the Dominican Republic in 1965 and went to Cuba after participating in revolutionary activity against the regime of Rafael Trujillo.

ESPINAL said he and his friends left Cuba because "Fidel Castro is worse than Trujillo." He said he "could not stand the atrocities and ruthless killings innocent people in Cuba at night at the Port of Mariel and that weapons and munitions were being stockpiled nearby."

The former police officer said the Cuban people do not believe Castro's talk of a North American invasion but indicated that they do think Cuban exiles might invade the country.

"THE PEOPLE of Cuba would welcome an invasion by North America," said Espinal, but he added that the people do not think it will happen.

Asked if the people are behind

Castro, Espinal said that large crowds seen at Castro's speeches are brought in small groups from the country and that each group has a Castro supporter in charge. IF THEY don't react properly to the speech, they are punished," he said. "They lose their jobs or worse."

First Court Hearing Tries Soph Class On 'Clean Up' Rule

The ASBYU Supreme Court will hear the case of the Homecoming Committee versus the Sophomore Class Wednesday at 7 p.m. in 288 Knight Business Bldg. in an open hearing.

The charge is made against the sophomore class by the Homecoming Committee for failing to follow rules concerning the cleanup of their floor building area. The sophomore class contends that they had done their part in cleaning up their area and the "mess" that remained belonged to other organizations.

If found guilty, the class could be asked to begin the cleanup by the first group to appear which they won in the Homecoming Parade on Oct. 15.

Chief Justice George Mangan said that this is the first time that a charge has ever been brought against a class. Mangan will be assisted on the bench by associate Justices Ron Walker and Don Udall.

Communist Idea Split Threatens U. S. Peace

by Phil Newson
UPI Foreign Editor

Despite occasional messages of good will between the leaders of Communist China and Soviet Russia, their ideological differences constitute a major split on the bedrock principles of Communism, and the United States is more than an innocent bystander.

The United States is in the background as an economic and military giant which must be reckoned with by both. The Russians say there must be "peaceful co-existence." The Chinese Communist say eventually there must be a war to the death.

RUSSIA has called in world Communist leaders to Moscow this month to try to end the present rift in the Peking-Moscow axis, but few persons expected the Red summit to succeed. The differences are too great between the two.

Communist China founded its government on three major precepts: allegiance with the Soviet and other Communist countries; expansion of Chinese Communism through Asia; undying hostility toward the United States. It has shown no indication of changing these.

SOVIET Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, though displaying no great animity toward the United States, has been enough of a realist to know the U. S. is strong enough to inflict incalculable damage in a nuclear war.

Khrushchev has said the basic principles of Karl Marx and V. I. Lenin must be modernized to conform with modern conditions and that the only alternative to war is peaceful co-existence. The Chinese Reds call this deviation and will have no part of it.

Melo-D's, a vivacious girls' have returned to Brigham Young University after a year of professional performances. These Melo-D's are Judy Bishop, Nedra Fullmer, and Lorene Black Smith. All three are Delta, Utah, and are sopranos at BYU.

BYU began their freshman year with the Program Bureau, were extremely active, toured and performing throughout the year. In the spring of 1959 received the Program Bureau award for the outstanding group.

Meantime, the talent and personalities of the group were not unnoticed elsewhere, and they were signed by the Glen Sponseller Dance Orchestra from Los Angeles. The next year the three girls appeared with the band in various ballrooms, such as the world-famous Hollywood Palladium.

LAST SUMMER Lorene Black married Phillip Ray Smith from Phoenix, Ariz., and she and her husband decided to return to BYU. So all three girls decided to leave the professional entertainment world, return to BYU and keep the Melo-D's together.

They have performed often on campus already this year, and, according to the Program Bureau, are in great demand for their smoothly blended voices and stylings.

U. S. Housewife May Help Lift Teachers' Load

by Louie Cassette
United Press International

One of America's wasted assets is being put to work in some communities to help solve a serious educational problem.

The asset is the brainpower of a large corps of college-trained housewives.

The problem is the teaching of English composition.

Colleges, and employers have been complaining loudly in recent years about the inability of many U.S. high school graduates to compose a passable letter, theme or report.

They have pointed out that it is well-nigh impossible for a young person to succeed in college or a career unless he has a reasonable facility in communicating information and ideas in writing. And they have demanded to know why high schools were failing to equip a large proportion of their graduates with this essential skill.

THE ANSWER is not hard to find. Skill in writing doesn't "come naturally" to anyone; it is developed only through practice—a great deal of practice.

Ideally, each student should be required, as part of his high school English courses, to write at least one theme or paper a week.

But studies show that many high school English students are assigned only four papers a year.

Dr. Paul B. Diederich, Director of the Educational Testing Service, says the paucity of writing assignments is a simple matter of "self-preservation" on the part of overworked high school English teachers.

MANY OF them are asked to teach classes of 35 to 40 students each, for five or six successive periods each day. Their total teaching load may be 200 or more students. That is twice as many students as the maximum recommended by such educational authorities as Dr. James B. Conant.

Obviously, no English teacher can be expected to correct and grade 200 themes a week, or even a major fraction of that number. She wouldn't have time to do so, even if she devoted all of her evenings and most of her weekends to the task.

That's where the college-trained housewives come into the picture.

With the aid of Ford Foundation grants, distributed through the Educational Testing Service, high schools in 16 widely-scattered American cities have been conducting an experiment during the past two years.

THEY HAVE hired housewives, with college degrees in English, to correct and grade compositions in collaboration with regular high school English teachers. The "home readers" usually work at home, while their own children are in school. They are paid for their work—in some places on the basis of 25 cents per theme; elsewhere at a flat rate of $1.25 to $2 per hour.

With this system, English teachers can assign themes much more frequently—and give their students the supervised practice which is indispensable to the development of proficiency in writing.

Chairs May Help Claim McKay Bldg. Stair Sitters

by Marilyn Pace
Universe Feature Writer
Crash! Bang! Stumble! Don't panic. All that noise is just someone tripping over bodies on the stair steps in the McKay Bldg.

Just why are these people sitting on the step? Do they like to jeopardize the lives and limbs of those scurrying to morning classes? Perhaps there is some deeper reason for this cluttering of the stairs?

IN ASKING a few students why they were sitting on the stairs, it was found that the majority felt there weren't enough study areas on campus. Therefore, during off hours they study on the steps.

Larry Thompson, a junior transfer student from California, summed up most of the complaints with this statement: "I have been sitting on the stairs ever since I came to this school simply because there is no place else to study. The libraries are always crowded."

WHAT COULD be done about this congestion on the stairs? Asking a few others produced these ideas: Many thought that obtaining more rooms for study areas would solve the problem. Others felt that simply placing chairs or desks at strategic locations in the halls would help.

Of course, not all the reasons for sitting on the stairs stemmed from such a driving desire for knowledge. One answer was to the point, "I sit on the stairs because I like to sit in the warm sunshine."

ONE GIRL likes a fellow marching in history. She figured that she can look busy studying there on the steps while waiting for boy friend to show up.

Solutions for this type of problem can only be found in an appeal to a personal sense of justice. The least the offenders could do is move off the stairs during the change in classes, during the morning rush hours.

Syracuse Skids...

Iowa Still Tops on I P

NEW YORK Oct. 31 (UPI)—The Iowa Hawkeyes retained their position as the nation's top major college football team today by accumulating the highest number of points in the weekly United Press International ratings since 1955.

Coach Forest Evashevski's unbeaten-untied team total 343 out of a possible 350 points. They were named on all 35 ballots turned in by the UPI board of coaches, picking up 29 first-place votes, five second-place votes and one third-place vote.

IT WAS THE highest point total in the UPI ratings since Nov. 16, 1955, when Notre Dame topped the list with 345. Ironically, the Irish were held to a 14-14 tie by Iowa the following Saturday and wound up second behind Maryland in the final ratings that year.

Minnesota jumped from fourth to second place in this week's ratings to lend further significance to the Gophers' clash with Iowa Saturday in their crucial "meetin' of the unbeaten." It will mark the first head-on battle between the top two teams in the UPI ratings since they were inaugurated in 1950.

IN TAKING over the runner-up spot, Minnesota also was named on all 25 ballots, gaining one first place vote and 241 points.

The remainder of the top 10 group was given a fast shuffle as a result of Syracuse's upset loss to Pittsburgh and Mississippi's tie against Louisiana State.

Navy moved from fifth to third, Missouri also jumped two notches to fourth, Ohio State vaulted from eighth to fifth and Mississippi skidded from second to sixth.

WASHINGTON advanced from ninth to seventh place, Tennessee climbed from 11th to eighth, Syracuse tumbled from third to ninth, and Rice jumped from 12th to 10th place in the UPI ratings. Ohio State each were awarded two first-place votes while the remaining first-place ballot went to Navy. The points are distributed on the basis of 10 for a first place vote, nine for second, eight for third, etc., so Iowa collected 290 points alone in first place votes.

BAYLOR slid from seventh to 11th place after bowing to Texas Christian and Michigan State's loss to Ohio State dropped the Spartans from 10th to a tie for 16th. Other members of the second 10 group included Duke, Arkansas, Wyoming, Wisconsin, Colorado, New Mexico State, UCLA, and Pittsburgh.

Swimming Team Applications Are Still Available

Application forms for the proposed Brigham Young University swimming and diving team are still available to all interested persons. The forms can be picked up in athletic director Eddie Kimball's office in the Fieldhouse.

SKIP BROOKS, who is in charge of organizations, urged all persons who desire the chance to swim or dive in intercollegiate competition to pick up the forms as soon as possible.

Brooks pointed out that projected plans will see the new "Y" swimming team competing with other teams in the conference on an unofficial basis until the administration grants official university representation.

NOT ONLY will there be intercollegiate competition but the team will have its own meets to decide club winners and will also have a water show for the benefit of the water-minded students on campus.

The BYU swimming team is still on the drawing board, so to speak. As soon as the applications are filled out and tryouts held perhaps the administration will realize the importance of a swimming pool to facilitate the swimming team's organization, Brooks suggested.

For additional information contact Brooks.
